

“SUPER SENSES”

As the name of the activity suggests its topic, it is related to the senses. Teacher told the students about an incident in which her friend’s pet knocked at itself out on the door frame. To connect the students with the topic she asked various questions and suggested the activity to find those answers. The students made a dog face with paper and eyes covered with blue cellophane to make them feel a dog’s vision. This activity enables the students to understand how dogs have different color perception than humans in which they cannot see red color. After this, the students used big cups as their ears and try to hear the whispers of their partner. This activity helped the students to understand that big ears of mice help them to hear better than humans. These activities helped the students to develop different skills like dexterity, problem solving, communication, personal organization and perception of risk.
